A gentleman of this city, who has been many years engaged in the prosecution of military claims, fell in accidentally with a case in which both a man and his wife received pensions for revolutionary services .--The singularity of the circumstance struck him so foreibly, that he instituted an inqui-27, and elicited from an old lady, the sole surviving descendant, the following facts,-(We state them substantially, but our informant not being present, it is possible that we may be incorrect in some insignificant partic-

Early in the revolutionary war, a man named Lane (we think) enlisted in a company raised in the neighborhood of Manchester to serve three years. He went, with his regiment, to the North, and there joined Washingten's army. Taking part in all the previous battles, he was severely wounded at Brandywine or Germantown, and during the battle and after, was taken care of by a brother soldier to whom he had become greatly attached, and who belonged to the same company with himself. The term of service having expired, these two soldiers were discharged, and returned home, devoted and inseparable friends. In the meantime the tide of war rolled on to the South, and the couple had searcely reached their destination, when they again enlisted to serve in General Lincoln's army, at that time engaged in the siege of Savannah. Our readers well know that Lincoln was afterwards cooped up in Charlessiege, to the Royal forces, under the command of Sir Henry Clinton. Throughout this siege Lane and his friend stood to their posts like heroes, and did their duty bravely. At last Lane's comrade was wounded in orn, and was carried off the field in the rrms of his devoted friend. What must have been the amazement of Lane on discovering that the brave comrade who had so long fought by his side, and had nursed him so tenderly when he was wounded, through the report of the attending surgeon, was a woman! It appears that she had accidentally fallen in with him somewhere, and had formed time, from some cause or other, she had made so little impression upon him that he did not recognise her in the least, when he afterwards met her disguised as a soldier. She was in dispair when Lane enlisted, and under the influence of that feeling, she fled from her parents' home, donned the continental unismance. The wounded woman recovered, cessible from all quarters. and as soon as the twain were released from captivity, they became one. They lived many years very happily together and left several children.

Incidents of this nature-disguised damsels following their lovers to the wars in the capacity of pages-were great favorites with all the old romance writers. WHY JOHN ADAMS WAS NOT A SHOEMA-Ken. The patriot, John Adams, it is said. was designed for a shoemaker, like his father. One day Deacon Adams, his parent, gave him some uppers to cut out by a nattern that had a three-cornered hole in it, by which it had hung upon a mail, and it was found that he had followed the pattern exnetly, triangular hole and all. The Peacon. upon seeing this, decided that John wasn't fit to be a shoemaker, and put him to learning. The old patriot would have made a good printer in an office where the rule is
